

Multi-Action Poker

Rules of Play

Multi-Action Poker is a poker game played on a poker table in which two dealers deal independent poker games simultaneously. Poker hands are separate and differentiated by colored playing cards, pots, and rakes. Each dealer may deal the same game (Texas Hold'em) or each dealer may deal a different game (Texas Hold'em and Omaha). Each dealer is responsible for his own game. This includes the handling of his table bank, player's chips, poker cards, and pots.

In addition the following rules apply:

1. Two different sets of gaming chips must be used to distinguish the separate poker games.
2. Each player will have designated betting areas for each hand.
3. Verbal is binding to the action closest to the player.
  - a. If both actions are on a player, then the bet will have to be verbalized or determined by the cards the player is holding i.e. red cards, and then the bet is from the red dealer. (casino option)
4. If a player loses all of his chips (gets felted) on one hand, and is no longer involved in either hand, the player can then move the minimum buy in to the hand with no more chips (felted hand) provided that he still has the minimum in both hands. (casino option)

Note: Players may participate in one or both poker games while at the table (casino option).
